

Bureau Veritas ISO 37001 ANTI-BRIBERY

MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS TRAINING

Identify and manage the risk of bribery in your enterprise and among your business associates to operate with integrity and reduce exposure to prosecution...

The issue of corruption has been identified as a cross cutting and corrosive issue that undermines public trust in local and national governments, business and civil society institutions. Along with national anti-bribery laws, international pressure in the form of UN and OECD anti-bribery conventions, have seen 41 countries establish laws forbidding the bribery of foreign officials, most notably the US's Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and the UK's Bribery Act, whose reach has impacted multinational companies operating within and beyond those countries.

It is not just the threat of financial penalties for companies whose representatives are found to have engaged in giving or receiving bribes, but the risk of directors' personal criminal or civil liability, that is driving the move to formalize management systems to assure compliance. Specifically, the publication of ISO 37001 Anti-Bribery Management Systems (ABMS) in late 2016, enables organizations to establish procedures identifying and prioritizing the treatment of bribery risks and to train up and maintain the competence of business associates working for and on behalf of the company to do business with integrity.

ISO 37001's structured approach to identifying, evaluating, analyzing and mitigating bribery risks with appropriate communication, training and procedures brings the standardized model used by other management systems to this important field of enterprise risk.
